

Terry Surles is currently on the staff of the Hawaii Natural Energy Institute where he is the program lead for technology integration and policy analysis. He previously has held a number of leadership positions in the broad area of energy and environmental systems analysis, research, and development during his 30+ year career. These include General Manager for Environmental Programs at Argonne National Laboratory, Associate Laboratory Director for Energy Programs at Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, Program Director for the California Energy Commission's R&D program, Vice President for both Environment and Electricity Innovations at the Electric Power Research Institute, and Deputy Secretary for Science and Technology at Cal/EPA.

He has served or is serving on a number of national committees, including three appointments with the National Academy of Sciences, and has also worked with a number of Hawaii-based organizations, including the Economic Development Alliance for Hawaii, the East-West Center, Enterprise Honolulu, and the Pacific International Center for High Technology Research. He has a Ph.D. in Chemistry from Michigan State University. He has over 200 publications, technical reports, and presentations to his credit.